

'Waugh' declared on Poms

DANIEL JOHNS

A revenge-fuelled Aussie side will declare Waugh today when recently axed Test star Mark leads a star-studded Bradman XI line-up into battle with England at Bradman Oval.

Just two days after the Poms belted Australia for the first time on home soil in four years, the Bradman side will carry the pride of the nation before a sell-out crowd. Skipped by Mark Waugh, the Bradman XI boasts such cricketing top guns as Mike Whitney, Michael Slater, Stuart McGill and Simon Katich.

Bradman Museum director Richard Mulvaney admitted the result of the Sydney Test and frenzied public interest had made today's clash the biggest in more than a decade of touring teams on Bradman.

continued next page

□ FINISHING TOUCHES: Bradman Oval curators Brian Darnell, Josh Woodcock and Scott Manuel make the final preparations to the wicket for today's international one-dayer between England and the Bradman XI in Bowral. Photo: DANIEL JOHNS

'Waugh' declared on visiting English side

from front page

"The stage is really set for a big match and it's been sold out for three weeks now," he said.

"We could have sold 20,000 tickets to this match if we had the room and the result in Sydney has really added some spice. We've never had this sort of response and it's been absolutely phenomenal."

The English are expected to field a near full-strength side for the clash and Bradman Oval curator Josh Woodcock has promised a feast of runs on an immaculate Bradman wicket.

The match will begin at 10.30am.